Roberta Altamari
Director of Religious Exploration and Youth Ministry

Whew, what a month this has been! I write often that working with youth consistently opens my mind and heart to new perspectives and possibilities. This month has gone even further and transformed me forever!

Mid-February, nine members of the Youth Group, Valerie, and I traveled to New York City for a social justice trip to learn about and work with the homeless community. Yes, there are plenty of homeless people right here in Boston, but New York City is home to the very special Youth Service Opportunities Project that offers an amazing program educating teens and adults about the homeless community. With real-life stories from people who are homeless and hands-on experiences working in shelters and soup kitchens, YSOP squashed stereotypes and opened our understandings of homelessness.

Hearing stories of transformation from Watertown teens who did the same trip, I expected I would feel inspired and grateful when I came home. How can meeting people who don't have a home to live in or decent food to eat not leave me feeling grateful for not having to worry about having such essentials in my life? But my real transformation was so much deeper and complex. When the only public bathroom we found on our return trip from the shelter was disgusting and then we heard that the church hosting a soup kitchen locked all the bathroom doors, it sparked a harsh reality check of wondering where homeless people living on the streets go to the bathroom. This is but one of many mindless daily privileges we have that some homeless people suffer without.

As this Connector goes to press, I am preparing to do a "Cardboard City: homelessness awareness overnight project" with our Youth Group in the pouring rain. Going without a comfortable bed to sleep in and limited food was the primary focus of this project to get a tiny sense of what it must feel like to go without. Sure, this doesn't bring us anywhere near truly understanding what it is like to be homeless because we know that after our experience that we get to go home to a warm bed and delicious food. But it is making us realize that there is so much more that homeless people suffer without than we ever think about. No access to modern day conveniences like transportation and kitchens, or even umbrellas for the least fortunate. Even the ones lucky enough to find overnight shelter still have to spend the days outside. No rain or snow days ... always stuck outside fending for themselves ... alone.

We discovered that a big loss for homeless people is respect and dignity. Over and over, we heard that homeless people are ignored and treated like they are invisible. It's true. How many times have I turned my head the other way to avoid looking at a homeless person because I didn't want to give him money? And now I know that treating people like

An Attitude of Gratitude Youth Sunday

FPS Youth Group with Roberta Altamari

Join us for a wonderful worship service led by our youth after being transformed by their recent social justice work. How did traveling to New York City to learn about and work with people who are homeless inspire our youth? What did they come home most grateful for? Did sleeping in cardboard boxes and going without the conveniences of regular teen life last weekend change their understandings of our world? Come find out. We will also honor our 8-year-olds with their First Chalice and be introduced to our 11-year-olds by their First Mentors. It is sure to be unforgettable and fill you with gratitude!

Our Partners in Haiti

Rev. Katie Lee Crane with Ms. Nichole Cirillo

Nichole Cirillo is a member of the Outreach and Mobilization Team of the UUSC (Unitarian Universalist Service Committee). Since January 12, just about everything she does is in service to the people of Haiti. When a UUSC assessment team visited their partners in Haiti last month to gauge the current situation they were deeply sobered by the magnitude of this emergency and the terrible losses suffered by every single person they met. Yet, every person they met demonstrated how ordinary Haitians are doing extraordinary things. Ms. Cirillo will tell something of our denomination's immediate response as well as longer-term plans.

We will Share the Plate with UUSC to support not only their work in responding to humanitarian disasters like the one in Haiti, but also to support their other initiatives in the US and around the world focused on civil liberties and also economic and environmental justice.

There will be a Hearthside Chat at 11:45 to have a conversation with Ms. Cirillo and learn more about UUSC's short- and long-term plans for relief work in Haiti.

The LaRhette family and others have continued to make gifts to this fund, which we use to give grants to First Parish teens who are needing financial help to enable them to explore UU faith development and/or social justice opportunities. For more information about the grant or how to apply, please contact Roberta or Katie Lee.

2010 Pledge Drive Update

Anyone who came to the service on March 7, Pledge Sunday, can tell you what an uplifting morning it was to see so many of the people who love First Parish come together and make their financial commitment. As the annual Pledge Drive began, in addition to 7 pre-pledges, another 47 households stretched and made a significant commitment to financially support this congregation that nurtures and sustains them. Without doubt, this also is an indication of emotional and physical support – stewardship in its full meaning.

During the rest of March and into early April, canvassers are contacting those who could not be present on March 7 and feel the karma of that service. We are confident that everyone will welcome this contact and do the best they can to try to make a minimum pledge or gift of $2,300-$2,400.

*Those who can give more, will; those who must give less will do all they can.
But, we know everyone will stretch.*

Of course, we acknowledge that not everybody can afford to support First Parish at that level. Thankfully, some among us are able to pledge higher amounts. Their generosity makes it possible for others among us to give at the level they can afford while still enabling us, as a community, to reach our goal. Those who can give more, will; those who must give less will do all they can. But, we know everyone will stretch.

Please be sure to notice the bulletin board as you enter the Parish Hall. In addition to general Pledge Drive information, some of the testimonials about giving that were spoken on Sunday are posted. There is space for you to add your personal statement.

In gratitude, that is far worse than not giving them money. This message was so significant that I tried it when I returned home. I was in Cambridge one day and a homeless man was walking around the cars stopped at a traffic light with a cup and a sign asking for money. I felt shy, but rolled down my window and said, "I'm sorry I can't help you, but I wanted to wish you good luck in getting your needs met today." The look on the man's face was pleasant surprise. He smiled at me and said, "Thank you, God bless you!" For me, it was a very small and simple act of kindness. For him, it was so much more!

I wonder if lack of respect and recognition is something that many people from minority groups suffer? I know that when I worked with disabled adults that they are often ignored as well. A disabled man in his wheelchair goes to get a coffee at Dunkin Donuts and everyone avoids looking at him. He doesn't need anyone's help. But a smile or hello would work miracles for his spirit!

As Unitarian Universalists, we proclaim the worth and dignity of all people as our first principle. I am now realizing that the first place to start could be simply saying "hello" to everyone we meet, no matter how different they seem from us. Sometimes, the people who seem the most different from us need our respectful recognition the most!

A Note from Fran

Dear Friends and Members of First Parish,

I am writing to let you know that I will be resigning from the position of Community Life Coordinator at the end of June.

This was a difficult decision for me to make, and it came after much thought, soul-searching and discussion with my family.

This will end ten years of service to First Parish on the staff (2000-02 as co-Dir. of Religious Ed.; 2002-08 as Cong. Administrator; and 2008-10 as Community Life Coordinator.) For me, it has been a great run! I am very grateful for the opportunity to have served you. I will be working with our staff and leaders this spring to ensure a smooth transition for the congregation leading up to June 30.

Some of you may have heard me tell the story that after my 3rd Sunday coming to worship at FPS (in the spring of 1998,) I went home and said to my husband, Philip, "You know...First Parish is going to become a BIG part of our lives." I didn't realize then the extent to which congregational life would come to be at the center of our lives, especially mine. But, even then, I knew in my heart that this felt like home and that it was already beginning to be my beloved community.

Having the opportunity to serve on the staff has been a gift, and one that has helped me to grow, professionally and personally. Being part of the staff team has given me the experience of working with colleagues in right-relationship and in creative collaboration, a rare and blessed experience.

I have been supported and nurtured by you all. You have stepped up in big ways and small to help me succeed in my different positions. You have been helpful, generous, and forgiving of my "human" moments.

With deep appreciation,

Fran

March 27th Coffee House to Benefit First Parish Sudbury and a Peruvian Music School

Captivated by the beauty and energy of the high altitude Peruvian town of Cusco and its people, Leslie B (a long time member of First Parish Sudbury Unitarian Universalist and musician in Ergo Canto duo --www.ergocanto.org) returned again and again. On her second visit she brought her flute so she could practice for an upcoming gig Ergo Canto was performing upon her return. Following a friend's recommendations for study, Leslie found herself on a tiny street asking the Music School Director for a practice room. Despite language challenges, Leslie found herself in a small open courtyard with several doors open to rehearsal and instruction rooms.

Spotting a concert announcement that very evening she returned to listen to student and faculty performances in a winter chilled glass ceiling auditorium at 10,000 ft. Wearing hat and gloves, Leslie particularly enjoyed the performance showcasing an original faculty member composition celebrating the Sacsayhuamón Incan fortress in Cusco that sounded ancient and modern simultaneously.

Founded by state resolution in 1950 as The Regional Music School of Cusco, in 1978 school came under the authority of the National Cultural Institute, in 1984 it became the Instituto Superior de Music "Leandro Alvinas Miranda". The instituto, with 250 current students, was authorized to train students for various music professions. It was the first music school at the national level to obtain that standing.

Practicing there daily, Leslie became a familiar face. One day the piano teacher offered to play piano and flute duets. It was then that Leslie discovered the terrible financial hardship the school suffered. The piano used at the concert had only 2 legs—the keyboard was supported by a wooden chair and a stack of boards. The only music available to staff was a closet sized room of photocopies. Leaving for home, Leslie offered payment for use of the practice room, but her offer was declined.

She decided the best way to repay the school for its kindness was to mail music books by various composers. Not once but as often as possible. Leslie is grateful for First Parish friends who have donated used copies of piano, voice, and instrument books. Last summer's visit enabled her to bring a flute and a trumpet (her friend Kim V's donation) to add to the flute she donated the previous visit. Quality instruments are hard to come by in a mountain city—even one known as a tourist destination. The city's classical music talents and symphony orchestra are largely unknown beyond the city limits and not included in tourist guidebooks. Leslie hopes to change this.

Leslie B will be performing at Coffeehouse on the Rocky Plain March 27 at 7pm at First Parish Sudbury Unitarian Universalist at 327 Concord Road, Sudbury, MA, 01776. Tickets are $12 at the door. Ergo Canto www.ergocanto.org and Dawn Kenney www.myspace.com/dawnkenney are donating their performances. Twenty percent of proceeds of the evening go to the Instituto Superior de Music Leandro Alvinas Miranda and the remainder to First Parish Sudbury.
